
Flopping a flush, then what

Posted by Whalewager - 2007/11/08 16:12

When you flop a flush (let's say you're highest card is 10 or Jack), do you slowplay or run the risk of running everyone off with a small bet??

Of course, there's also a chance someone has flopped a better flush than you, but not very likely and I obviously don't wanna see another card from my suit (4 card flush)

What's the best way to get full value out of this??

=====

Re:Flopping a flush, then what

Posted by shay - 2007/11/16 01:35

I would probably bet, but cautiously. I would probably lose too. lol. That's just my luck with this game. haha.

=====

Re:Flopping a flush, then what

Posted by tater03 - 2007/11/24 19:45

I tend to go slow just to see if the other players check. It doesn't always work out that way but that is what I usually do.

=====