
I know it's time for me to take a break, seriously

Posted by Whalewager - 2007/11/06 20:18

Absolutely sickening, the last handful of sit n go's I've been in

I can honestly say that the only time I have been behind after the flop was once with JJ's vs KK's in the past half dozen or so.

I know I am going to get people to come in here and say, "Thats poker". Yeah "that's poker", but it's also bullcrap :angry:

Re:I know it's time for me to take a break, seriou

Posted by 4TexasHoldem - 2007/11/07 07:08

I understand what you're saying. I've had similar experiences in SnG's. I hate the fact that with SnG's I can be knocked out the tourney with a little bad luck; I can play really well up to that point, get knocked out in the final stages so end up losing my initial stake.

Re:I know it's time for me to take a break, seriou

Posted by Whalewager - 2007/11/07 10:49

I will admit that I've gotten myself in trouble early on getting too invested in hands that I otherwise should leave alone.

I know many guys don't like playing much the first couple times around, but I like to be aggressive from the onset of the game

Re:I know it's time for me to take a break, seriou

Posted by 4TexasHoldem - 2007/11/07 16:52

Aggression from the onset of the game is how I like to play too... I like to have an aggressive table image; that way, when I get a good hand I also get paid :)

Re:I know it's time for me to take a break, seriou

Posted by shay - 2007/11/14 21:26

Another newbie question, What are sit n go games? I have no idea what that means. I play on Yahoo for free since I'm not very experienced at it. I don't want to lose money on it yet. lol. I will one day though. ;)

Re:I know it's time for me to take a break, seriously

Posted by Slinky - 2007/12/06 11:02

I like to be able to watch the game that I'm going to be playing in. The one thing you can pick up on immediately is who is playing in alot of pots and who is not. I have heard that if possible, you want to sit to the left of the most aggressive player at the table

Re:I know it's time for me to take a break, seriously

Posted by tater03 - 2007/12/09 14:30

I have always like to sit and watch first if at all possible before joining a table. It just helps me to see how others play the game.

=====